The chemist told the prosecutor he had one more test to complete before his report would be ready. The analysis is being made to determine if the stains are blood stains.

Crawford was murdered Sunday, May 14, and his body containing 18 stab wounds, was placed in a small pond just west of the city in the river lowlands. It was found a few hours after being placed in the pond.

POLICE HUNTING AUTHOR OF NOTE TO O. S. U. CO-ED

COLUMBUS, May 24—City detectives and postal authorities continued their search today for a man who tried to lure a prominent Ohio State university co-ed to a rendezvous, after a plan to apprehend him went awry when the "bait" failed to show up.

Authorities had planned to have the student appear at a hotel at the time specified by the man in a letter addressed to the girl. However, it was learned, an official connected with the university refused the co-ed permission to participate in the plot.

Meanwhile, postal inspectors were to receive a note, reportedly written by a 27-year-old Columbus man, for the purpose of checking it against the handwriting in the letter to the young woman.

Retired Army Man Due For Questioning About His Activities

WASHINGTON, May 24—The frank admission of a witness that his "anti-Jewish" organization maintains contacts with Italy and Germany, today caused the Dies house committee to redouble its efforts to link totalitarian governments with subversive activities in this country.

George Deatherage, of St. Albans, W. Va., testified his organization, the Knights of the White Camellias, and similar groups in the United States, exchange communications with "Cur" in Italy, an international anti-Communist league, and the International Committee against Communism operating out of Erfurt, Germany. The two foreign organizations, he said, hold "annual international congresses with delegates from every country."

Committee investigators last year tried to show that foreign governments are promoting American organizations of a Nazi and Fascist character but Deatherage's testimony marked the first time that a witness volunteered information on foreign connections.

BRITISH HORSES IN FIRST THREE EPSOM POSITIONS

EPSOM DOWNS, Eng., May 24 Huge fortunes in sweepstakes winnings went to the United States today when Lord Roseberry's Blue Peter, the outstanding favorite, won the 160th running of the Epsom Derby, England's greatest racing classic.

Edward Esmond's Fox Cub finished second and Heliopolis, the promising entry of Lord Derby, was third.

It was thus an all-English finish, and British sports supremacy on home grounds was vindicated after a series of setbacks to foreign entries at Epsom and Aintree, where the Grand National is run.

A crowd estimated at half a million watched the thrilling race in warm, sunshiny weather. Injuries suffered in an automobile accident yesterday kept Queen Mary away from the course, but other members of the royal family were there to lend the derby its annual touch of social eclat.

The finish was a disappointment to William Woodward, president of the New York Jockey Club, who with Hypnotist, a highly-favored entry, had hoped to score a historic double. Woodward's thoroughbred Johnston won the Kentucky derby at Churchill Downs a few weeks ago.

MERCURY REACHES 96

A variation of 36 degrees was recorded in the high and low temperatures for Tuesday. The highest mark for the day was 96 degrees, highest reported this year. During the night the mercury dropped to 60 degrees. Fair and cooler weather was forecast for late Wednesday and Thursday.

"He was a brave boy. He didn't want to ask for a transfer because he wanted to be near his wife."

Murphy's wife, now expecting her third child, is enroute to New Orleans to visit her parents.

Funeral Rites For Two Officials To Cause Postponement

Adjournment in the trial of the $13,361.40 suit of William F. McCrady, W. Franklin street, as administrator of the estate of his son, John, against the Benedict Transportation Lines, Inc., of Columbus, is scheduled in Common Pleas court Thursday and Friday because of funeral services for Probate Judge C. C. Young and Harley E. Mowery, superintendent of the Pickaway County Home.

An adjournment will be held Thursday afternoon due to the services for Mr. Mowery. Mrs. Clara Macklin, of Tarlton, a member of the jury, is a sister of Mr. Mowery. There will be an adjournment on Friday for the services for Judge Young.

Clayton Young, son of the late judge, was dismissed from the witness stand, Tuesday afternoon, shortly after he was called to identify a series of photographs taken at the scene of the auto and tractor-trailer wreck in which Mr. McCrady was killed. Mr. Young was excused when word was received that his father's condition was worse.

Other witnesses called Tuesday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. William McCrady, Emmitt Barnhart, Dean White and Bryan Custer. Barnhart was questioned concerning the earning capacity of John McCrady. White related McCrady, Asa Elsea and Bernard (Continued on Page Six)

Russia's Unyielding Stand Forces Minister To Give In, English Say

LONDON, May 24—Britain's cabinet, according to reports in usually well-informed quarters, today agreed to accept Soviet Russia's terms and join a three-power alliance including France.

Official quarters remained silent on this point following a cabinet meeting, but the general opinion was that Russia's unyielding stand, demanding an unequalled triple alliance, had won over Britain's plan of conditional guarantees against German-Italian aggression.

After more than two hours the cabinet session ended with no announcement. Earlier, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, who returned this morning from the League of Nations council meeting at Geneva, conferred with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

At Geneva, Lord Halifax conferred on the proposed triple entente with French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet and Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador to London.

French foreign office circles yesterday stated that Britain, France and Russia had finally reached a tentative agreement on a triple mutual assistance pact in conversations at Geneva. French sources said the British and Soviet governments were expected to approve the agreement.

AMERICANS JOIN WINNIPEG CROWD GREETING RULERS

27 LIVES LOST IN SUBMARINE, NAVY REPORTS

32 of Squalus' Crew Safe; Others Believed Drowned In Water-Filled Room

'CHAMBER' BEING USED

Seven Men Taken From Deep Ocean Reported Walking On Falcon's Deck

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 24—Twenty-seven men probably lost their lives in the submarine Squalus disaster, it was indicated officially this afternoon.

Names of 32 men who were aboard the Squalus were read off to the press and it was announced that "the names omitted from the list were in the flooded compartments and there is little hope of finding them alive."

There were 59 officers and men on the ill-fated Squalus when it dived at 7:40 a. m. yesterday and became imbedded on the ocean floor at a depth of 240 feet below the surface.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 24—Seven of the 59 men trapped 240 feet below water surface in the ill-fated submarine Squalus were brought to the deck of the rescue ship Falcon this afternoon in the big dome shaped device known as the "rescue chamber."

The condition of the first seven men was not immediately known. A radio report went out that the men apparently were in good condition and that they walked across the deck of the Falcon without assistance.

When this report was put up to Lieutenant Commander J. J. Curley, at headquarters in Portsmouth navy yard, he said "We know nothing officially about their condition as yet."

Lieutenant Commander Curley said that the rescue chamber would continue to go down for more men without cessation until all of them had been brought up.

The news that seven had been rescued was received with heartfelt relief by the waiting naval officers at the local base. Statically awaiting rescue in the sunken submarine were five officers, fifty-one enlisted men, two navy yard observers and a representative of the contractor of the vessel.

Early today their condition was a matter of conjecture. Whether any of the victims were dead was not known but navy officials adhered to the hope that all might be rescued alive.

Discussing the plight of the trapped men, navy officials pointed out that the submarine is shaped like a big cigar with seven compartments—the forward torpedo room, the officers' quarters, the control room, the crews' quarters, the forward engine room, the after engine room and the after torpedo room.

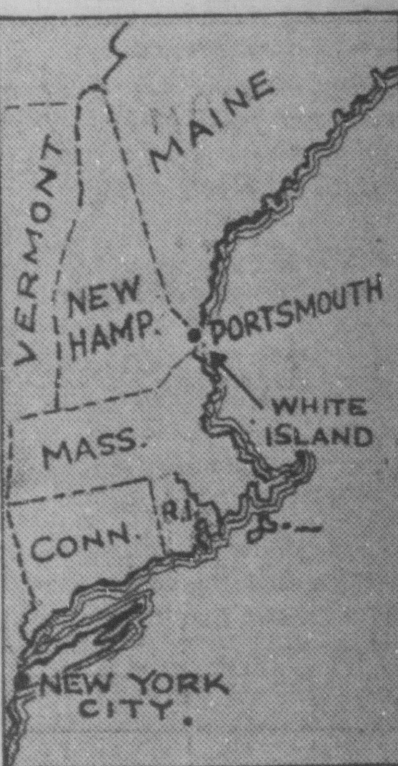

They believe that three of the compartments are flooded—the crews' quarters, the forward engine room and the after engine room.

Big Valve Blamed Cause of the disaster is laid to the failure of one of the two high induction valves which lead down into the submarine to close when the vessel dived. One of these valves is 31 inches in diameter, the other 17 inches in diameter. It was the 31-inch valve which failed to close. The 17-inch valve has a safety device which automatically closes when it received water pressure. The 31-inch valve is not designed to close automatically.

The Squalus, one of the navy's newest and largest submarines, which had been launched last September from the navy yard here, had been making routine experiments. It left the harbor yesterday on what was to have been another routine operation.

At a point about five miles southeast of the Isle of Shoals, which is Hampton Beach, N. H., the submarine dived. This was (Continued on Page Six)

NICKY ARNSTEIN CLAIMS MOVIE HURTS CHARACTER

HOLLYWOOD, May 24—Nicky Arnstein, former husband of Fannie Brice, the comedienne, asks $400,000 damages from the Twentieth-Century-Fox film company in a suit on file today.

Arnstein alleges the company's film, "Rose of Washington Square," injures his character. He named as defendants, Darryl Zanuck, the studio's production chief, Joseph Schenck, president, Tyrone Power, the actor, Nunnally Johnson, the writer, and others. Arnstein said that he had twice been convicted of crimes in his career, but of late years had led an "exemplary, honorable and righteous life," and has re-married and established a home. The film, he claimed, revived his past in the public mind in such a manner that he can no longer live a quiet and secluded life.

27 LIVES LOST IN SUBMARINE, NAVY REPORTS

32 Of Squalus' Crew Safe; Others Believed Drowned In Water-Filled Room

'CHAMBER' BEING USED

Seven Men Taken From Deep Ocean Reported Walking On Falcon's Deck

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 24—Twenty-seven men probably lost their lives in the submarine Squalus disaster, it was indicated officially this afternoon.

Names of 32 men who were aboard the Squalus were read off to the press and it was announced that "the names omitted from the list were in the flooded compartments and there is little hope of finding them alive."

There were 59 officers and men on the ill-fated Squalus when it dived at 7:40 a. m. yesterday and became imbedded on the ocean floor at a depth of 240 feet below the surface.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 24—Seven of the 59 men trapped 240 feet below water surface in the ill-fated submarine Squalus were brought to the deck of the rescue ship Falcon this afternoon in the big dome shaped device known as the "rescue chamber."

The condition of the first seven men was not immediately known. A radio report went out that the men apparently were in good condition and that they walked across the deck of the Falcon without assistance.

When this report was put up to Lieutenant Commander J. J. Curley, at headquarters in Portsmouth navy yard, he said "We know nothing officially about their condition as yet."

Lieutenant Commander Curley said that the rescue chamber would continue to go down for more men without cessation until all of them had been brought up.

The news that seven had been rescued was received with heartfelt relief by the waiting naval officers at the local base.

Stoically awaiting rescue in the sunken submarine were five officers, fifty-one enlisted men, two navy yard observers and a representative of the contractor of the vessel.

Early today their condition was a matter of conjecture. Whether any of the victims were dead was not known but navy officials adhered to the hope that all might be rescued alive.

Discussing the plight of the trapped men, navy officials pointed out that the submarine was shaped like a big cigar with seven compartments—the forward torpedo room, the officers' quarters, the control room, the crews' quarters, the forward engine room, the after engine room and the after torpedo room.

They believe that three of the compartments are flooded—the crews' quarters, the forward engine room and the after engine room.

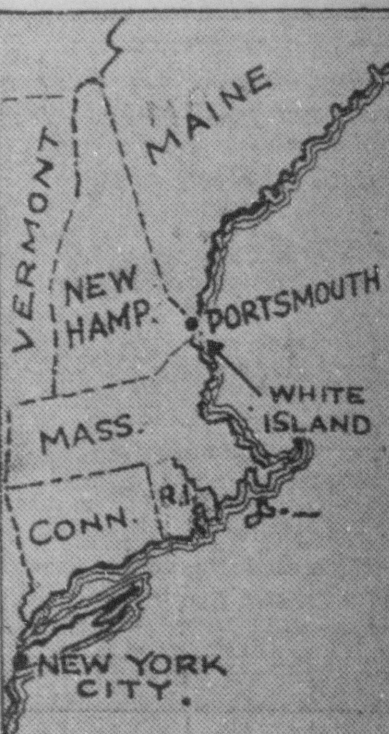

Big Valve Blamed

Cause of the disaster is laid to the failure of one of the two high induction valves which lead down into the submarine to close when the vessel dived. One of these valves is 31 inches in diameter, the other 17 inches in diameter. It was the 31-inch valve which failed to close. The 17-inch valve has a safety device which automatically closes when it received water pressure. The 31-inch valve is not designed to close automatically.

The Squalus, one of the navy's newest and largest submarines, which had been launched last September from the navy yard here, had been making routine experiments. It left the harbor yesterday on what was to have been another routine operation.

At a point about five miles southeast of the Isle of Shoals, which is Hampton Beach, N. H., the submarine dived. This was (Continued on Page Six)

BRICKER NAMES TURNER JUDGE IN KIME PLACE

COLUMBUS, May 24—Former Attorney General Edward C. Turner, a Republican, was appointed today by Governor Bricker to succeed the late Judge Harold "Lefty" Kime on the Franklin county Common Pleas court bench. Judge Kime died last week. He was a Democrat.

Turner is a former Franklin county prosecutor and served as attorney general from 1914 to 1916 and again from 1926 to 1928. In the Republican primary last November he unsuccessfully sought nomination for the supreme court.

NICKY ARNSTEIN CLAIMS MOVIE HURTS CHARACTER

HOLLYWOOD, May 24—Nicky Arnstein, former husband of Fannie Brice, the comedienne, asks $400,000 damages from the Twentieth-Century-Fox film company in a suit on file today.

Arnstein alleges the company's film, "Rose of Washington Square," injures his character.

He named as defendants, Darryl Zanuck, the studio's production chief, Joseph Schenck, president, Tyrone Power, the actor, Nunnally Johnson, the writer, and others.

Arnstein said that he had twice been convicted of crimes in his career, but of late years had led an "exemplary, honorable and righteous life," and has re-married and established a home. The film, he claimed, revived his past in the public mind in such a manner that he can no longer live a quiet and secluded life.

ANTI-FRAUD ACT BALLOT CALLED BY OHIO SOLONS

Lucas Countian's Measure
On Calendar For Final Decision

BRICKER, SCHORR CONFER

Much Business On Slate
For Legislators In
Tuesday Confab

COLUMBUS, May 24 — Subject of a storm of controversy for the last two weeks, the bill of Rep. Cyril Culp, (R-Lucas) making it a crime to conspire to defraud the state, appeared on the senate calendar today for a vote.

One of the major pledges of the Republican party, the measure, designed to outlaw so-called "legal graft" in the buying and selling of materials and supplies to the state, precipitated a conference between Governor Bricker and Republican State Chairman Ed D. Schorr over Schorr's objections to sections of it.

It was understood that the party chairman disapproved of an amendment inserted by the house when it passed the bill that would allow attorneys general to call special grand juries in any county where conspiracy to defraud the state was suspected.

Schorr Silent
The governor maintained his position that the bill is a sound measure, but that the legislature would have to be the judge. Schorr had nothing to say for the record when questioned about the conference.

The governor admitted that he and Schorr discussed "a lot of things," including the Culp bill, and it was reported that patronage was one of the chief topics of conversation. Bricker's economy program has had county chairmen worried insofar as parceling out jobs to needy and worthy politicians is concerned.

Meanwhile, the house scheduled a vote on poor relief administration, and, with the Republican steamroller in fine fettle, the measure was not likely to have trouble.

Democrats in the house were primed for some plain and fancy harpooning of the bill, however, and a warm afternoon was promised.

Two important bills received senate approval yesterday — one to increase the civil service commission from two to four members and the other providing for payment of two-thirds of the cost of operating county engineers' offices from auto tax and gasoline tax funds.

The latter measure would release county general funds for poor relief matching.

The house passed a bill revising the institutional building authority and raising the maximum issuance of bonds from $7,500,000 to $10,000,000.

Pollution Hit

Also approved by the lower branch were bills to establish an Ohio River Valley sanitation commission and limit the powers of the state health department in regulating coal mine drainage. Limiting the department's powers in this respect was a compromise measure to insure passage of the sanitation bill.

Other bills passed by the house would:

Prevent admission into Ohio of new sick and accident insurance organizations; set up a 54 hour week of employees of state welfare institutions and provide that employees living outside the institutions have the $35 monthly maintenance fee added to their salaries.

Increase the tax valuation necessary for a village school district from $500,000 to $750,000; relieve stockholders of corporations doing business with a government body from penalty for having an interest in a public contract.

Measures Lose

Bills to allow Christian Science practitioners to receive fees for their services and increasing the salaries of Common Pleas judges in counties under 100,000 population if judges serve gratis 30 days by special assignment were lost in the house by the adoption of motions to table them.

A measure of Sen. Fred Adams (R-Bowling Green) which would place the public employees retirement system on a "pay as you go" basis was unanimously approved by the senate. It provides that only enough money be placed in the fund to carry it over the biennium rather than over a longer period.

The senate also passed a bill setting up a board of five examiners to license watchmakers.

Washington Graduates Hear O. S. U. Professor

Dr. Earl W. Anderson, professor of education, Ohio State university, Columbus, discussed effectively the factors of human relationship in his address before the capacity audience at the annual commencement exercises of Washington township high school Tuesday in the auditorium. Addressing the gist of his remarks to the class of seven graduates, he told them that the problem of adjustment to society was the real problem now facing them. He said that "getting along with people" was the real foundation of a successful life.

Exile Ends Life

DESPAIRING at the trend in Europe away from his social ideals, Ernst Toller, 46, exiled German playwright, hanged himself in his New York hotel room. Toller, at the age of 25, was president of the short-lived Soviet republic of Bavaria.

31 GRADUATE AT WALNUT SCHOOL FINAL EXERCISE

Thirty-one were graduated Tuesday night at exercises held in Walnut township school.

The speaker was the Rev. James Thomas, pastor of the Broad Street Methodist Episcopal church, of Columbus. The Rev. Mr. Thomas stressed the importance of spiritual, mental and physical preparation to meet the problems of life.

Barbara Clair Stelhorn and Helen Elizabeth McCord, who shared honors for class salutatorian, presented a discussion on "Education in Ohio." Clarence Eugene Miller was class orator.

Presentation of diplomas was made by Homer Reber, president of the Walnut township board of education. Music was provided by the school orchestra and a girls' trio of Columbus. The Rev. Martin Mickey, of Cedar Hill, gave the invocation and benediction.

Members of the graduating class were: Iretha M. Alenderfer, Clyde E. Barr, Dorothy Jane Barr, Merrill Fausnaugh, Helen Marie Flanagan, Erma Esther Frazier, Matthew Grubb, Greely W. Hall, Herman Lowell Hines, Forrest Hoffman, Marjorie Mae Huffer, Warren G. Kinsey, Ruby Virginia Kinser, Erma M. Lat-house, Clarence A. Marshall, Clarence Eugene Miller, Jr., Lewis N. McCain, Helen Elizabeth McCord, Lucile Avanel Norris, Robert Vinton Perrill, Eileen Rager, Luella Imogene Rager, Louise E. Runkle, Dorothy Anna Smith, George O. Smith, Kathryn Elizabeth Smith, LeRoy H. Smith, Barbara Clair Stelhorn, Gayle Wal-delich, James W. Ward and June Wilcox.

TRANSIENT HELP PROBLEM EASY, MARCY CLAIMS

Transient aid, a problem facing Ross county commissioners, has never been a worry to Pickaway county.

D. H. Marcy, county relief director, explained Wednesday that what transient aid is necessary is handled through his department. He approves the payment of funds for providing shelter for families that are stranded in the city. No aid is given individuals. Mr. Marcy said the expense is about $6 a month and is paid from the county's general fund. No money is spent for transportation of transients.

Until a few weeks ago the Salvation Army carried on the work among transients in Ross county, aided by a $10 a month subsidy. A ruling of the attorney general halted this subsidy so the problem was placed on the Ross county commissioners.

SECURITY BOARD AIDE TO ASSIST LOCAL PERSONS

Postmaster A. Hulse Hays announces that a representative of the Social Security Board will make his regular periodic visit to Circleville on Thursday, May 25, and will maintain an office in the postoffice between the hours of 12 noon and 2 p. m. "This service," the postmaster said, "is available to the residents of Circleville for the purpose of explaining the old-age insurance provisions of the Social Security Act and assisting any person who has a claim either because of the death of a wage earner or attainment of age 65."

The postmaster further stated that his attention had been called to statistics prepared by the Social Security Board from the records of the wages maintained in Baltimore, Maryland, covering the year 1937. The board's report discloses that wage earners in covered employment in Ohio were credited with wages totaling $1,948,946,211 received during the year 1937. There were 1,901,958 employees in Ohio, making an average of $1,025 per employee.

The report indicated that Ohio stood fifth in the national average of wages per employee for that year. The postmaster stated that the Social Security Board's representative would be glad to give additional information from this study.

Miss Hazel Matz in her valedictory discussed a fanciful meeting of three unknown soldiers at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the World War. In her discussion of their services in battles through the ages, she brought out the idea of the waste of youth through war and how faith with these unknown soldiers had been broken through its repeated outbreaks.

John Florence, school superintendent, presented the Senior class and after a brief talk, George D. McDowell, superintendent of county schools, gave them their diplomas.

The Rev. O. R. Swisher of Stoutsville pronounced both the invocation and benediction.

At the close of the exercises, Miss Matz was presented the Herff-Jones medal for outstanding scholarship during her four years in high school.

Other members of the class in addition to Miss Matz and Miss Hanley were Miss Alice Diltz, George DeLaVergne, John D. Leist, Bernard Wolf and Norman Leist.

BERLE VS. BARTON

How sensitive the State Department still is about the Spanish arms embargo was indicated when Assistant Secretary Adolf Berle wrote a letter to Congressman Bruce Barton taking exception to a newspaper column by Barton's daughter, in which she told how shells made in Pittsburgh had found their way into Franco's hands.

Apparently the State Department was trying to hold the Congressman responsible for his daughter's statements.

Miss Barton, however, not only is a brilliant writer but has a mind of her own, and she answered Asst. Sec. Berle herself. When Berle wanted to know the source of her information, she told him, giving dates, names, facts.

She has heard no more from Mr. Berle.

UNDER THE DOME

Governor Dick Leche of Louisiana came to town the other day full of questions about reports that Huey Long's assassination was to be investigated. Actually the great bulk of the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau continues as before, except that Hopkins is putting new vitality in it. Harry, incidentally, has now recovered almost completely from his illness, has gained ten pounds and appears to be a new man.

done. Jimmy didn't need to tell his father that reports to the effect that Kennedy had broken with the Administration were all wet.

BERLE VS. BARTON

How sensitive the State Department still is about the Spanish arms embargo was indicated when Assistant Secretary Adolf Berle wrote a letter to Congressman Bruce Barton taking exception to a newspaper column by Barton's daughter, in which she told how she made in Pittsburgh had found their way into Franco's hands.

Apparently the State Department was trying to hold the Congressman responsible for his daughter's statements.

Miss Barton, however, not only is a brilliant writer but has a mind of her own, and she answered Asst. Sec. Berle herself. When Berle wanted to know the source of her information, she told him, giving dates, names, facts.

She has heard no more from Mr. Berle.

UNDER THE DOME

Governor Dick Leche of Louisiana came to town the other day full of questions about reports that Huey Long's assassination was to be investigated. He talked particularly to Harry Costello, one of the chief witnesses that there was advance information regarding the murder. Harry Woodring trotted over to the White House when he heard his War Department was going to lose jurisdiction over the Philippines. He tried to prevent the transfer to Ickes, but the President wouldn't listen. Senator Jim Mead of Buffalo is quietly probing reports that the bond firm of Stranahan, Harris and Co. stands to make a huge profit on rebuilding the old Honeymoon Bridge over Niagara Falls. Conditions surrounding the contract are unusually secret. SEC officials attach importance to the survey of small business finance needs now being conducted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Unfortunately the survey is not being completed in time for the SEC presentation to the monopoly committee.

HOOPER-HOPKINS BUREAU

Accounts that the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was being transferred to the State Department under the reorganization bill were highly erroneous.

This was Herbert Hoover's pet bureau. Since his time, it has been allowed to languish, but it is not going to the State Department. On the contrary, it is getting new vitality under Harry Hopkins. The importance of this Bureau is at least one thing on which Hopkins and Hoover agree.

What Roosevelt's reorganization move actually did was to transfer 100 foreign representatives of the Bureau to the State Department, where they work in cooperation with the consuls. Hopkins retains the right to give them direct orders, gets reports from them, exercises a veto power over replacements and new appointees.

Actually the great bulk of the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau continues as before, except that Hopkins is putting new vitality in it. Harry, incidentally, has now recovered almost completely from his illness, has gained ten pounds and appears to be a new man.

Note—Hopkins plans that the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce will particularly concentrate on Latin American trade.

PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

WE HAVE NO NATIONAL DEBT

The Senate is getting panned right and left for voting 300 million more dollars into the agricultural appropriation bill. Two-thirds of this was in a single item—parity payments to farmers which many Senators felt had been promised under the A.A.A. This act contemplates that if and when grain and cotton prices fall below 75 percent of 1909-1914 prices, as they have done, Congress should make up the difference in part at least, as compensation for the tariff made prices given to industry.

PETTENGILL Well, what can you expect, Mr. President? Who started this point, — the President has raised his eyebrows and shrugged his shoulders. Congress! What can you expect?

Who started to spend $40 million on Passamaquoddy? Was it Congress? Who started to spend $200 million on the Florida Canal? Was it Congress? Congress turned down both Passamaquoddy and the Ship Canal. Did that stop the White House? It did not. Who started Grand Coulee and Bonneville? Who put the heat on Congress time and again to get it to vote more millions to T.V.A. when it was reluctant to do so? Who insisted on a blank check against W.P.A. funds? Who said that "boondoggling" is a "grand word"? Who scolded Georgia because that second home wasn't spending Federal money fast enough?

Who dangled a bridge before Maryland Voters on a Sabbath afternoon? Who named Congressman Goldsborough of that state, host to the President on the bridge expedition, to the Federal bench? "We Have No National Debt", says Judge Goldsborough. Because we owe it to ourselves it does not exist. It is an asset as well as a debt, and so it cancels out. Why worry? Who now suggests we should have a double entry, two-budget gadget? Who wanted to destroy the Comptroller General in the Reorganization Bill last year?

Who addressed Congress on last January 4th on the question of reduction in spending, and in effect said, "Which hot potato do

New Jersey Governor Maps Program To Protect King And Queen

More than 2,000 regular army troops, National Guardsmen, state and local police will guard King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England when they traverse New Jersey by rail and automobile enroute from Washington to New York on June 10 under plans being whipped into shape today by Gov. A. Harry Moore.

The royal couple will enter the state aboard their train at Trenton and proceed to Red Bank where they will be taken by automobile 11 miles to the Fort Hancock Military reservation to board a naval vessel for New York harbor. About 900 National Guardsmen assisted by local police will patrol the 50 miles of railroad right of way.

ground from under his feet. He has thrown away his shield and is without a sword. He is naked before his enemies.

If this new theory is sound why not spend billions more? Why not cancel all taxes? We are taxing too much, and not spending enough. Let us appropriate prosperity. Why stand we here idle? What is $30 million when we need $80 billions? If billions to W.P.A. will make us prosperous, why not billions to farmers, to veterans, to the aged? Why "economize only at the expense of the farmer"?

The President, by abandoning the sound principles he once bravely championed has gotten himself into an impossible position. It is not likely that we he will ever extricate himself. He has not only made political allies of the "gimmies" but he has written their creed and anointed it with his blessing. "Investments for prosperity".

The major responsibility for what happened in the Senate rests squarely on the White House. Bigger and better investments! "We have no national debt"! Onward cash-in soldiers!

AT THE GRAND

That matchless sleuth, Sherlock Holmes, was brought to vivid life on the screen of the Grand theatre yesterday by the distinguished Basil Rathbone, who shares top billing with Richard Greene and Wendy Barrie in 20th Century-Fox's thrilling production of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Hound of the Baskervilles."

Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck is to be congratulated for this almost uncannily astute piece of casting — Rathbone simply is Sherlock Holmes.

The classic, one of literature's most shocking spine-chilling mystery stories, has been transferred to celluloid with thrilling realism. For background the picture has perfectly reproduced the misty, Devonshire country, where a fiendish, ghostly hound is believed to wander, leaving a terrifying trail of horror and chilling the blood of the countryside with its unearthly howls.

On Dartmoor's edge stands the gloomy old Baskerville mansion, to which young Sir Henry Baskerville (Richard Greene) has come from Canada to claim his inheritance. It has been closed since the mysterious death of his Uncle Charles. Preoccupied with his whirlwind romance with his pretty neighbor Beryl Stapleton, (Wendy Barrie), Sir Henry laughs at the stories about the hound.

you care to pick up, gentlemen?" Who said, "Many people have the idea that . . . we are spending more than we can afford. That is not so."

Who fought Congress all this Winter to get it to appropriate tens of millions more for W.P.A.? Who now says that Federal spending is an "investment for prosperity" and implies that we ought not even try to balance the budget until, if, as, when and maybe we again have an $80 billion income, at which time "present tax laws will yield enough each year to balance each year's expenses"?

I know something of the psychology of Congress would have gone along with the President if he had not scuttled his moral leadership by abandoning the sound fiscal position he once so bravely championed. Congress stood by him in the Economy Act of 1933. That was when said "too often liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy."

But after that Congress saw that the money saved by taking war veterans off the rolls was being blown in—and billions more—on theatre projects in which Communist writers vilified George Washington; on Passamaquoddy, which Congress knew every expert agency in government had vetoed unanimously; on a Ship Canal which half of Florida and all the other 47 states did not want; in dubious W.P.A. increases just before elections, etc., etc.

But the President's Passamaquoddy does not alone account for the complete loss of his moral leadership over public spending. It is the adoption of the new Eccles-Goldsborough ledgerman that spending is not a disagreeable medicine to ease distress, to soften the economic curve, but that it is a thing of positive virtue. "Investment for prosperity."

That is the new rabbit. In adopting it the President has cut the

SENDING SOLDIERS HOME

ACCORDING to a cold examination of the situation there are not at present in Europe problems big enough or acute enough to justify a war which by logical development would spread from Europe and become a universal event."

Those are the words of Benito Mussolini, spoken at Turin during his current inspection trip in the Piedmont region which is expected to take him to the French frontier. If there is nothing today which justifies war, then there should be nothing which justifies heavy and continually increasing armament. The dictators, however, use constant threat of war for conquest. They pile up military costs which threaten to overwhelm them and the whole world in ultimate disaster and ruin.

Why not demobilize? Demobilization this week or this Summer would now require a major social and economic readjustment which might prove as immediately disastrous as anything short of war could be. In Germany and Italy—and in other European lands—it would disrupt war industries, create large scale unemployment and perhaps bring on revolution.

Yet armament has already disrupted peaceful industries and constructive international relations. The great problem today is not so much preserving our present so-called peace as working out a safe way to demobilize the huge military establishments now burdening hundreds of millions of people and depriving them of normal life and happiness.

MISDIRECTED CHARITY

THE Welfare Commissioner of New York City now tackles the begging racket in the metropolis. A first step is to place posters in subways, elevated trains, surface cars and busses telling the public that relief is available to all genuinely needy persons. The authorities cannot stamp out begging unless citizens help by refusing to give money to panhandlers.

There are said to be 10,000 "fakes and phonies" soliciting alms in New York. Many of them make in a month four or five times as much as they could get on relief. They have organized clubs and associations which follow the racket technique and achieve a total annual "take" of $15,000,000. That is one and one-half times as much as the Greater New York Fund (for charity) asks the city to raise. The charitable people who give to the racketeering beggars throw away their money and do actual harm to the community thereby.

World At A Glance

—By— Charles P. Stewart

ENSLAVED AS much of the European press is, the very fact that it is enslaved gives a certain amount of authority to its utterances. What it says is recognized as, in effect, official. An editorial by the newspaper Ivestia, in Russia, by Herr Goebbels, in Germany, or by Signor Gaidya, in Italy, is accepted by the state department as implicitly as if it were a formal declaration by Dictator Stalin, Fuehrer Hitler or Duce Mussolini.

French journals may not print everything that Premier Daladier wants them to print, but, in recent weeks, they haven't printed anything that he prefers they shouldn't print; they don't dare to. Even English papers stay hushed on subjects the government asks them to keep quiet about. In their cases it isn't so mandatory, but they're careful.

The American press, of course, publishes whatever it likes, short of libel, which doesn't signify in connection with these international discussions.

OUR FREE PRESS PUZZLES THEM

However, when our papers make uncomplicated remarks concerning the totalitarian governments, these latter resent such comments as governmentally inspired, just as if Washington could, did it choose to do so, control our press even as they do their own. Possibly they really don't sense the difference—that our stuff represents public opinion in general; not necessarily the administration viewpoint. On the opposite hand, maybe we fail to take into consideration the chance that the overseas press' inspired expressions don't truly voice THEIR various countries' true public opinion (it would be suppressed if it did, if totalitarianism disagreed with it).

So there perhaps is more or less mutual misunderstanding. Illustratively: A few days ago the Nazi newspapers burst into a chorus of acclaim of Fascist military excellence—of the Italians' prowess as fighters.

ITALIAN WARRIORS DERIDED I don't think it ever has been disputed that the Germans are formidable warriors. But the modern Italians have been quite widely criticized as rather weak-kneed soldiers. No doubt it was unjust, but it's a fact unquestionably. And the Germans have done a good bit of the criticizing. There was a reason for it, too. Germany, Austria and Italy were allied before the last World war. But when the war broke out Italy reneged. Finally it joined the anti-German allies. "I never," wrote the Kaiser to the Italian king, "will forget your treason."

Throughout the rest of the war the Germans and Austrians never would admit that the Italians were any appreciable loss to them. Similarly the allies never admitted that Italy was much of an aid to them. Consequently they refused to grant to Italy what it considered its fair share of the post-war gravy. Hence the Italian yowl for recognition of its disappointed aspirations.

GERMANS DON'T LIKE ITALY It stands to reason that there must be a lot of anti-Italian public feeling left in Germany in regard to Italians.

Nevertheless, in present circumstances, Duce's support at today's juncture. Perchance he has some extra-confidence in Signor Mussolini personally—or something.

Anyway, there seems to be a popular German revulsion against Italy, and Herr Hitler wants to counteract it.

Otherwise, why would Goebbels, Hitler's publicity agent, be boosting so energetically for Italy, as a coking good partner, despite the ex-kaiser's opinion of it as an abominably poor one? The state department's hunch is that Goebbels, as Hitler's press agent, is trying to administer to Germany an antidote to anti-Italian public opinion. The state department's skeptical that it will "take" indefinitely. However, the department's fearful that it may take long enough to start a war.

LINDBERGH PLEADS FOR RESEARCH

WASHINGTON—Colonel Lindbergh uncorked some eye-openers on U. S. failure to keep up with German fighting aircraft in his closed-door appearance before the House Military Affairs subcommittee. But this testimony was mild compared to what he told Civil Aeronautics Authority officials at a secret meeting the day before.

On Capitol Hill, the Lone Eagle was his usual self, laconic and reserved. At the CAA he was fiery and voluble, dominating the conversation for almost two hours. Chief point of his remarks was a deadly comparison of the aerial research facilities of the two countries.

"Germany is far ahead of us in the number of planes being produced," he said. "But that is not so serious. What is extremely dangerous is the fact that Germany is far ahead of us in the quality of the ships she is turning out. That is a matter of gravest concern to the future security of our country."

"I can't warn you too strongly that we had better get busy and do something about it. We need research facilities and need them badly. Do you realize that Germany has five big and four small research laboratories, while the United States has only one? Think what that means in terms of the future. If they are already making better planes than ours now, what will they be doing in a few years with all their scientific developments?"

Asked his opinion of the one U. S. aviation research station at Langley Field, Va., which he inspected, Lindbergh replied, "It's all right as far as it goes, but it should be much larger and we should have at least two or three others like it."

The ace flyer also laid great stress on the importance of stimulating interest in flying among youngsters.

"Your pilot-training is of utmost value," he declared, "not only for national defense purposes but for the development of civil aviation. You should promote interest in gliding. There is very little of that here. In Germany glider clubs are all over the place."

NOTE—Despite the fact that the U. S. is woefully behind Germany, plus the fact that more than 60 percent of U. S. planes are manufactured on the West Coast, Congress has persistently refused to appropriate the $4,000,000 for a research station at Sunnyvale, Calif. When the Senate did approve the plan, it was killed in the secrecy of a conference committee.

WAR SCARE ERASED

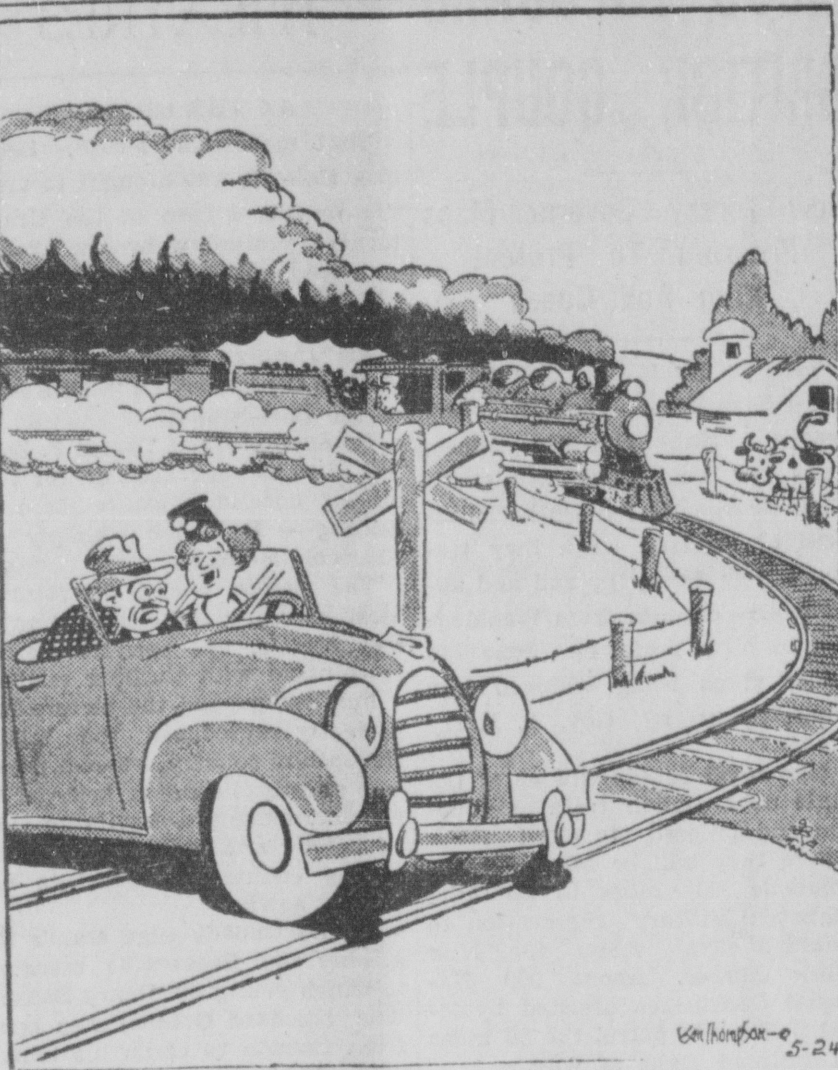

One of the things Jimmy Roosevelt reported to his father after his return from Europe was that war tension had eased considerably and that there probably would be no war this Summer.

(The State Department thinks that Europe is in better shape also, but is not quite so optimistic as Jimmy.)

Another thing James reported was that Ambassador Joe Kennedy was going to remain on as Ambassador to Great Britain as long as there was an important job to be

Shingles: A Disease Used To Study Nerves

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ONE of my readers has asked me to discuss the disease known as "shingles"—what causes "them" and what can be done for "them." To the best of my ability I will comply, although I usually avoid the topic because what can be done for it could be put into a very small space indeed.

Shingles is of much more interest to the medical profession than it is to the patient. The medical profession has learned a great deal from the study of shingles about nerve distribution in the skin. In fact, nearly all we know about the subject has come from Dr. Henry Head's study of patients with shingles.

Excruciating Pain

From the patient's viewpoint, shingles presents itself first as an excruciating pain. This pain is usually around the ribs or the waist, although shingles can occur anywhere that nerves go in the skin. A second favorite spot is on the forehead or face, and I have seen shingles running down the legs. The pain goes on for three or four days, without any external signs, and nobody can account for it. It is a pain indescribable in its intensity. A doctor friend of mine who had shingles on his forehead said that for a few days he had a headache that he thought was meant for a horse.

Then, finally, an eruption on the skin breaks out. It is a cluster of blisters surrounded by an angry red area. And although the pain does not abate much, it is a relief when the eruption comes out because the cause of the pain is explained; a relief because, uncomfortable as it may be, shingles is not dangerous.

The cause of shingles has been found to be a hemorrhage or inflammation in the ganglion which belongs to the sensory nerve that goes to the skin. The eruption outlines the distribution of the nerve exactly, and that is why the study of shingles has been so useful in medicine. It has taught us the sensory areas of the skin.

That is also why shingles is so painful. It is a pure nerve pain. Its scientific name is herpes zoster. The scientific name for the fever blister is herpes labialis. The reason a fever blister hurts so is because it, too, is a nerve pain, its nature probably being similar to herpes zoster. Shingles is probably an infection. Certainly one attack protects from any others. That is about the only comforting thing that can be said about it. Once you have had it, you won't have it again.

Another Feature

Another feature about it: It affects mostly old folks, usually those over 60 or 70 and almost invariably those over 40.

After the eruption subsides there is a scar left and the chance that pain will persist for a long time—often a year or more. This is the most annoying stage of all because while the last stage pain is not as severe as at the beginning, the skin is tender and sensitive. As treatment not much can be done. The pain can be eased, and local dressings to the eruption are protective. In the last stages infrared light or x-ray therapy helps more than anything else.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Week Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

TOO STRONG TO PASS

THE "TRA-PASS" is a cunning device to produce big scores, when it works. It consists of keeping your mouth shut when you are really strong enough to bid, in the hope that on your next turn you will have an opportunity to make a profitable penalty double of something higher or else stick in a bid of your own which the opponents will double under the impression that your first pass showed you were weak. It is unwise to try this, however, when you are so inordinately strong that it is unlikely anybody will be able to make another bid.

At one table West thought he had a fine hand for a trap pass of 1-Spade and was extremely chagrined when North and East also had to pass. The contract was set two tricks, for a score of 200, whereas those who doubled and got into a No trump game made 400. West should have known that the chances of the other players bidding any more was extremely remote if he passed his powerhouse. He was too strong.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

THE TYPEWRITER was silent. Eleanor sat before it with her chin cupped in her hands. Her eyes were fastened on the blank page, but her thoughts were off dreaming, not at the words she meant to put on the white paper. She was dreaming of the parade of days during the month past since she had met Dennis Pryor.

May days and May nights. It seemed to her that those days had been fuller and richer than any she had ever known. Every hour of the day had a new meaning. She was sharply aware of things she had forgotten; of the dew on the grass in early morning, of the fresh, clean feeling one had walking after a spring shower, of the pink that suffused the sky before the twilight fell, of the stillness of the night when women are suspended between earth and heaven alone with their thoughts.

The melody that sweetened living, the melody she thought she had lost, sang through her being. She woke with eagerness, and slept, slipping from a waking dream into a continuance of it in sleep.

She reached for the limp leather volume that was her engagement book. She turned its pages, reading the brief items. Ride with Dennis. French cinema with Dennis. Dennis to dinner. Ballet with Dennis. It was full of Dennis. And of other items that had to do with him. Shopping trips. Dressmaker's appointments. Appointments with a masseuse.

Phil—and others—were often at those "dinners with Dennis." Once Jessica had gone along to tea with them. But Dennis had always made her feel that they were two on an island.

Reading those items, she had mingled emotions. She thought, perhaps, she had neglected her family. Suddenly she wanted to do something for them. She felt flooded with happiness, more than she could bear.

She rang for her secretary. "Lucy, I'm going to play hooky from work today."

Lucy said: "Yes, Mrs. Parrish. You ought to have a holiday, too. Ring up the ticket agency and get yourself two matinee seats for whatever show you want to see. Charge them to my account and take one of your friends."

"Are you sure that there isn't something I can do for you?" Eleanor shook her head. She said: "No. I'm going to ask Miss Somers to come in town to lunch. Then I'm going shopping."

She wanted to talk to Alida. She wanted to talk about Dennis. She was like a girl in love and she wanted to talk about it. Not that she intended to tell Alida anything about Dennis actually. She just wanted to talk about him to someone.

She lunched with Alida at the Ritz. Alida said: "Well!" when she met her. "What have you been doing to yourself? You look about twenty."

"Do I really?" Eleanor asked eagerly, feeling very foolish, but anxious to be assured.

"Is it the spring, or can it be . . . oh, no, it couldn't be love! If I didn't know you so well, I'd swear it was."

"Of course it isn't!" Eleanor said, and rushed into conversation about an exhibit of modern paintings she'd seen.

"Who's Dennis Pryor?" Alida asked abruptly.

Eleanor felt color rise through her throat into her face. "Dennis Pryor? Oh, sort of a cousin-in-law to Grace Mordecai. Why?"

"The proverbial little bird—the one with the very large eyes, ears and mouth—told me that you'd been riding in the park with him these spring mornings. Knowing how you loathe any sort of exercise in the mornings, I thought perhaps that might have accounted for the girlish glow in your eyes."

Eleanor lit a cigaret very slowly. "How ridiculous! Mr. Pryor rides beautifully and you know I've taken up riding?"

"How's Phil?"

"As usual. Darling Phil."

"That's what I've always thought of him, too. Does he ride, Eleanor?"

Eleanor shook her head. "No, what's that got to do with it? What are you trying to say?"

"Oh, I'm still harping on my favorite subject: Husbands and wives liking to do the same things. It seems to me that it's such a sound idea. It puts such a protective little fence around the home property."

"And do you think we need a protective fence around our home property?"

Alida nodded deeply. "I do. I think any home property needs to be protected at times. Such times, for instance, as when a woman is in her second youth—in her middle thirties—and it is spring and she's a little tired of spring being the same as it has for a good many years. AND when, just beyond the fence and eager to take it in a mighty leap, there is something handsome, new and exciting waiting to pounce."

"How dreadful you make it sound, Alida. I shall get myself a cap with lavender ribbons, a warm shawl and settle down by my hearth and invite you to come and witness how close I am to it."

"It's a picture I should love to see. I recommend that you paint it for yourself when you picture the years ahead."

Eleanor said coolly: "Paint it for me, darling, and I'll put it in my study."

"I will, and it probably will be one of the most attractive pictures of Phil you'll ever see."

Eleanor answered: "I don't want to rush you, Alida, but I'm shopping this afternoon. You won't mind if I ask for the check?"

She shopped all afternoon. She bought elaborate and expensive fishing tackle for Phil. She bought a bicycle for Sonny and a pair of wide gold bracelets for Jessica.

She had the butler put the things in her study and told him to have tea served there at five. And would he ask Mr. Parrish, Miss Jessica and Sonny to join her there?

"What is this, Christmas?" Phil said when she gave them their presents.

Eleanor said: "No, Phil. I was just full of spring fever and thought it would make me feel nice to make you feel nice. Sonny, darling, please don't try to ride that thing in here! Daddy'll take you to the park tomorrow and you can try it out there."

Phil had not reacted as she had hoped. He'd said: "Thank you, Nell," in a very quiet way, as if, somehow, he had known that her conscience had something to do with her burst of generosity.

It seemed to her that her little surprise party had fallen flat. She felt cheated, and there was something else that she could not be articulate about; she felt the need to cover up something.

She said: "Jessica, I have another surprise for you."

"The bracelets are lovely, Mother," Jessica said in her musical, young voice that always was slightly detached.

"Don't you want to know what it is?" There was a slight note of exasperation in Eleanor's voice. Jessica looked up at once, politely. "Of course, Mother."

"I've arranged for you to go to Europe next month. Three months in England and France, darling, with the German girls and their chaperone. We must start getting your clothes together at once. You're sailing on the Normandie the second week in June."

"That was sweet of you, Mother. But I'm afraid I can't accept. You see, I have made other plans."

"YOU have made other plans?" Eleanor hit her lip.

Disbudding is practiced by gardeners for two very different reasons. On very young, or newly transplanted plants, disbudding is done to conserve the plants energy while it is establishing itself. The other reason for disbudding is to obtain large, fine quality blooms for show purposes.

As shown in the accompanying illustration, when disbudding peonies pinch out all but one main bud on each stem. This limits the flowering to one blossom on each stem. Disbud as soon as the flower buds are big enough to handle for at that time only a minimum of the strength will have gone into the bud that is to be pinched out.

On young or newly transplanted peonies it is advisable to allow only three or four terminal buds to develop.

27 LIVES LOST IN SUBMARINE, NAVY REPORTS

at 7:40 a. m. It was due to rise at 8:40 a. m.

When the Squalus failed to come up or report by radio, the Sculpin proceeded past the rocky ledges which comprise the Isle of Shoals. Soon the Sculpin sighted a red smoke bomb, which indicated that the vanished submarine needed assistance.

Telephone Used

A few minutes later the Sculpin observed a marker buoy and within a short time contacted the commanding officer of the Squalus by telephone. The phone communication revealed that one of the high induction valves had not been completely closed, admitting considerable water to the ship and that before she would be able to come to the surface the opening valve must be closed from the outside.

The commander of the Squalus advised that no attempt be made to use the Momsen lung, a device used in such contingencies, but that an effort be made to raise the ship with all aboard. Apparently there was no time to report whether any men had been injured. While the conversation was in progress the line was broken. There was no further communication until 8:45 o'clock last night when a "condition satisfactory but cold" message was dramatically tapped on the hull of the submarine.

Once the plight of the Squalus became known, the navy went into action. Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth navy yard, notified the navy department at Washington. Then began the mobilization of the navy's rescue forces.

Racing against time, ships sped from the submarine base at New London, Conn., from the Boston navy yard, and divers were rushed by airplane from the diving school at Washington.

The U. S. S. Falcon, the submarine rescue ship carrying all the latest equipment to deal with an emergency such as this arrived at the scene from New London.

It carried a full crew of trained divers. In addition a crew of fourteen divers flew from Washington and landed at Newport, R. I., from which point they were rushed to Portsmouth under motorcycle escort.

The destroyer Semmes also came from New London and the U. S. S. Brooklyn from New York, as well as a number of smaller vessels all ready to aid in any way they could.

The trapped men have sufficient emergency rations of food and water and a plentiful supply of oxygen, enough to maintain them for several days, according to navy officials.

All submarines are equipped with an escape hatch from which a line is floated to the surface. Men trapped in a submarine can come up this line, one by one, all the while breathing through the Momsen lung.

The Momsen lung contains a clamp for the nose and a mouth piece which when tightly gripped by the teeth enables the person using it to inhale air from a small oxygen tank.

There is a danger, however, in using the Momsen lung. A too rapid ascent from great depths might bring an attack of "bends," induced by the pressure. Any man using this device must exercise restraint and slowly ascend the line.

Commander Naquin of the Squalus, in the brief telephonic contact he had with Lieutenant Commander George A. Lewis of the rescue submarine Sculpin, advised against the use of lungs. He thought it would be a better plan to try and bring up the ship with the crew intact.

Diving operations were hazardous because of the depth at which the Squalus is sunk. The lower a diver goes the harder it is for him to work. The Squalus is imbedded on the ocean's floor 240 feet below the water's surface. While diving operations can be carried out at a depth as low as 300 feet, few men are able to descend that far and retain enough stamina and energy to work. Down that deep it is almost impossible for divers to lift their arms or legs because of the terrific pressure of the water.

The crew of the Squalus, like all submarine crews, have had experience in using the rescue chamber or the Momsen lung. They have undergone drills and are fully aware of the probable methods that will be employed in attempts to rescue them.

The morale of the men trapped on the ocean's floor was a matter of considerable discussion by navy men today. The "condition satisfactory but cold," message gave rise to the firm belief that their morale was good despite the certainty that they are all aware that they are staring death in the face.

Naval officials were mystified as to why the Squalus happened to fill the ballast tanks for a deep sea dive with one of the high induction valves open. It is assumed at the navy yard here that

SUB NAMED FOR FISH
PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 24.—In common with all United States naval submarines the sunken Squalus bears the name of a fish, naval officials explained today. The "Squalus" is a species of shark. It is pronounced "Skway-lus." It comes from the Latin meaning "a large sea fish."

Those whose birthday it may be prepared for a quite unforeseen upsetting of desired plans, with strangers as well as powerful persons figuring in the disturbance. Writings, contracts and documents are concerned, and travel seems to hold annoyance. But with tact or finesse in handling difficulties, there may be definite readjustments.

A child born on this day may have rather unusual talents and ambitions, although it may be disposed to put over its programs by expediency rather than principle. It may be restless, fond of change and inclined to social pleasures, in which it may find sensational popularity.

there may have been a mechanical failure. The navy gave the press excellent cooperation. Lieutenant Commander J. J. Curley was appointed as contact man with the press.

First reports were that there were sixty two aboard the ill-fated Squalus. However, it developed that three navy yard representatives who had been scheduled to make the trip with the Squalus, had not gone out. Nobody seemed to know why the Squalus, they were Lieut. Malcolm E. Garrison and Machinists John R. Curran and Jesse A. Thomas.

GEORGIANS WHIP ATLANTA PASTOR ON LONELY ROAD

ATLANTA, Ga., May 24—A band of about a dozen men last night kidnaped the Rev. Grady R. Kent, pastor of the Church of God in suburban Egan Park, and took him to a lonely road where they administered 30 lashes with a whip. Fulton county police were told today.

The minister, who returned to the city by street car after the whipping, was reported to be in a painful condition today at the home of one of the church members.

County police launched an investigation of the affair after a delegation from the church called at police headquarters to report it. The members said they believed the whipping was caused by trouble the church had recently with other residents of the city, who have claimed services were being held too late at night and that members were disturbing the peace.

The abductors, police were told, warned the minister that they would give him "until Sunday to get away from that church."

27 LIVES LOST IN SUBMARINE, NAVY REPORTS

at 7:40 a. m. It was due to rise at 8:40 a. m.

When the Squalus failed to come up or report by radio, the Sculpin proceeded past the rocky ledges which comprise the Isle of Shoals. Soon the Sculpin sighted a red smoke bomb, which indicated that the vanished submarine needed assistance.

Telephone Used

A few minutes later the Sculpin observed a marker buoy and within a short time contacted the commanding officer of the Squalus by telephone. The phone communication revealed that one of the high induction valves had not been completely closed, admitting considerable water to the ship and that before she would be able to come to the surface the opening valve must be closed from the outside.

The commander of the Squalus advised that no attempt be made to use the Momsen lung, a device used in such contingencies, but that an effort be made to raise the ship with all aboard. Apparently there was no time to report whether any men had been injured. While the conversation was in progress the line was broken. There was no further communication until 8:45 o'clock last night when a "condition satisfactory but cold" message was dramatically tapped on the hull of the submarine.

Once the plight of the Squalus became known, the navy went into action. Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth navy yard, notified the navy department at Washington. Then began the mobilization of the navy's rescue forces.

Racing against time, ships sped from the submarine base at New London, Conn., from the Boston navy yard, and divers were rushed by airplane from the diving school at Washington.

The U. S. S. Falcon, the submarine rescue ship carrying all the latest equipment to deal with an emergency such as this arrived at the scene from New London. It carried a full crew of trained divers.

In addition a crew of fourteen divers flew from Washington and landed at Newport, R. I., from which point they were rushed to Portsmouth under motorcycle escort.

The destroyer Semmes also came from New London and the U. S. S. Brooklyn from New York, as well as a number of smaller vessels all ready to aid in any way they could.

The trapped men have sufficient emergency rations of food and water and a plentiful supply of oxygen, enough to maintain them for several days, according to navy officials.

All submarines are equipped with an escape hatch from which a line is floated to the surface. Men trapped in a submarine can come up this line, one by one, all the while breathing through the Momsen lung.

The Momsen lung contains a clamp for the nose and a mouth piece which when tightly gripped by the teeth enables the person using it to inhale air from a small oxygen tank.

There is a danger, however, in using the Momsen lung. A too rapid ascent from great depths might bring an attack of "bends," induced by the pressure. Any man using this device must exercise restraint and slowly ascend the line.

Commander Naquin of the Squalus, in the brief telephonic contact he had with Lieutenant Commander George A. Lewis of the rescue submarine Sculpin, advised against the use of lungs. He thought it would be a better plan to try and bring up the ship with the crew intact.

Diving operations were hazardous because of the depth at which the Squalus is sunk. The lower a diver goes the harder it is for him to work. The Squalus is imbedded on the ocean's floor 240 feet below the water's surface. While diving operations can be carried out at a depth as low as 300 feet, few men are able to descend that far and retain enough stamina and energy to work. Down that deep it is almost impossible for divers to lift their arms or legs because of the terrific pressure of the water.

The crew of the Squalus, like all submarine crews, have had experience in using the rescue chamber or the Momsen lung. They have undergone drills and are fully aware of the probable methods that will be employed in attempts to rescue them.

The morale of the men trapped on the ocean's floor was a matter of considerable discussion by navy men today. The "condition satisfactory but cold" message gave rise to the firm belief that their certainty that they are all aware that they are staring death in the face.

Naval officials were mystified as to why the Squalus happened to fill the ballast tanks for a deep sea dive with one of the high induction valves open. It is assumed at the navy yard here that

Washington Agog as Royal Garden Party Nears

The British embassy, Washington, with its spacious grounds

June 8 in the spacious grounds of the British embassy in Washington. A favored few of the 1,300 will also be invited for tea with their majesties on the pillared portico of the embassy. The names of these fortunate have not been revealed. Like all American garden parties the menu will include strawberries and cream.

JUDGING by the lunar aspects for this day, there may be a sudden upset to cherished plans. This may be attributable to careless or irregular handling of writings, documents or even oral matters. Conflict or opposition may come from high sources. Also strangers seem to figure in the disturbance. A journey is fraught with anxiety or annoyance. However, with precaution, tact and a clever grasp of the menacing predicament, there is much to be gained. Resort to tactics of a social nature might smooth out difficulties and prove lucrative.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a quite unforeseen upsetting of desired plans, with strangers as well as powerful persons figuring in the disturbance. Writings, contracts and documents are concerned, and travel seems to hold annoyance. But with tact or finesse in handling difficulties, there may be definite readjustments.

The navy gave the press excellent cooperation. Lieutenant Commander J. J. Curley was appointed as contact man with the press.

First reports were that there were sixty two aboard the ill-fated Squalus. However, it developed that three navy yard representatives who had been scheduled to make the trip with the Squalus, had not gone out. Nobody seemed to know why they hadn't. They were Lieut. Malcolm E. Garrison, and Machinists John R. Curran and Jesse A. Thomas.

CARDINALS AND REDLEGS STAGE HEATED AFFRAYS

American "Race," All Yankee; Cleveland Drubbed By Murderous Attack

By Pat Robinson
NEW YORK, May 24—It is no secret that the strength of the American league lies in the East with the Yanks and Red Sox and it is becoming increasingly evident that all of the power of the National league rests in the West.

The Dodgers, Phillies, Giants and Bees went on their first swing through the West with high hopes of getting no worse than an even break with the Pirates, Cubs, Reds and Cardinals.

Thus far the four eastern clubs have a combined total of seven victories to show against 23 defeats, distributed as follows: Dodgers and Giants, five each, Bees, six and Phillies, seven.

The Reds, who are challenging the Yanks as a home-run producing outfit, ran their victory string to eight straight yesterday on the strength of a four-ply wallop by McCormick and a slight edge in pitching for Vander Meer over Mungo of the Dodgers, the score being 3-2.

And the Cardinals, with the aroma of that World Series coin strong in their nostrils even at this distant date, refuse to yield to the rampant Reds. With Fiddler McGee pitching a five-hitter, the Cards again turned back the Phils, 6-1, for their fifth consecutive victory.

Giants, Bees Drubbed
The Giants and Bees were unmercifully trounced by the Pirates and Cubs. The Pirates fell on Walter Brown for eight runs in one inning and romped in behind Sewell, 13 to 4, and the Cubs slugged the Bees dizzy, 15 to 8.

The "race" in the American League is becoming more laughable every day. Those amazing Yanks have now increased their lead to 4 1/2 games over the Red Sox and show no signs of mercy for the weak and helpless.

The young men of Manhattan have made it 12 in a row by taking the Indians, 7-3. And they did it in the usual Yankee style—homers by Henrich, Dickey, Rolfe and Gordon accounting for six of the Yankee runs. Johnny Allen was the victim of this murderous assault.

Meanwhile, the Red Sox were dropping one to Buck Newsom and the Tigers, 7-2, in a game notable only for Hank Greenberg's eighth homer.

The Athletics, playing inspired ball lately, overcame the Browns, 7-3, and moved up into a tie with the Senators for fifth place. The Senators fell back when the White Sox came from behind in the ninth to win, 5 to 4.

NEGRO FIGHTER READY TO FACE BRITISH CHAMP

LONDON, May 24—"Homicide Henry" Armstrong, hard-slugging American Negro, today skipped through a light workout as the last training preliminary before entering the ring tomorrow night to defend his world's welterweight title against British challenger Ernie Roderick.

Armstrong, former featherweight champion and current lightweight as well as welter titleholder, is odds-on favorite to defeat the 25-year-old Englishman. Armstrong's trainers reported that a hand injury, which the colored champ sustained in a fight a few years ago, is restored to normal and shouldn't hamper his windmill type of attack.

Although Roderick is being hailed as the best welterweight Britain has produced since the days of Jack Hood, dopesters in London's leather-pushing industry aren't plunking down many shillings on the Britisher's chances of scoring an upset victory.

From Roderick's camp it was reported the challenger was likewise in tip-top shape, and would be ready to go the full 15 rounds at the indoor Harringay arena. Armstrong, usually a wild puncher, will have to curb his out-of-bounds shots tomorrow, as the British boxing head has decreed that the American will defend his title under English boxing rules. A foul would cost him the fight.

Red Birds, St. Paul, Brewers In Fight For Third Position

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 24 — The stage was set today for a shift in positions in the American association pennant race with Columbus and St. Paul tied for fourth place and both only one game behind the Milwaukee squad, in third position.

The Columbus Red Birds fought an uphill battle against the Toledo Mud Hens at Toledo yesterday and took the only game of the series 3 to 2.

The game was a pitcher's duel between the Birds' Al Fisher and Toledo's Freddie Hutchinson, the reputed $100,000 rookie. A couple of Toledo errors cinched the game for Columbus.

At Minneapolis Kansas City defeated the Millers 10 to 6 to retain its lead in the circuit. Minneapolis scored all its runs in the first inning.

Milwaukee won its series opener against St. Paul at St. Paul 9 to 6. Roy Johnson, of the Brewers, sent a long homer over the spot he usually occupies in right field.

St. Louis and Indianapolis, idle yesterday, were scheduled to play today.

Vandy Defeats Brooklyn; Lonnie Frey Hit By Ball To Win Tilt

CINCINNATI, May 24 — The Cincinnati Reds still were neck and neck today with St. Louis for first place in the National League after their 3 to 2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday.

It was the eighth straight win for the Reds, and credit for it went to Johnny (No-Hit) Vander Meer, who allowed the Dodgers only seven hits. Van Mungo, the opposing pitcher, also allowed only seven hits.

The deciding run was made in the seventh inning when Lonnie Frey, Cincinnati, was hit by a pitched ball with the bases loaded.

CARDINALS AND REDLEGS STAGE HEATED AFFRAYS

American "Race" All Yankee; Cleveland Drubbed By Murderous Attack

By Pat Robinson
NEW YORK, May 24—It is no secret that the strength of the American league lies in the East with the Yankees and Red Sox and it is becoming increasingly evident that all of the power of the National league rests in the West.

The Dodgers, Phillies, Giants and Bees went on their first swing through the West with high hopes of getting no worse than an even break with the Pirates, Cubs, Reds and Cardinals.

Thus far the four eastern clubs have a combined total of seven victories to show against 23 defeats, distributed as follows: Dodgers and Giants, five each, Bees, six and Phillies, seven.

The Reds, who are challenging the Yankees as a home-run producing outfit, ran their victory string to eight straight yesterday on the strength of a four-ply wallop by McCormick and a slight edge in pitching from Vander Meer over Mungo of the Dodgers, the score being 3-2.

And the Cardinals, with the aroma of that World Series coin strong in their nostrils even at this distant date, refuse to yield to the rampant Reds. With Fiddler McGee pitching a five-hitter, the Cards again turned back the Phils, 6-1, for their fifth consecutive decision.

Giants, Bees Drubbed
The Giants and Bees were unmercifully trounced by the Pirates and Cubs. The Pirates fell on Walter Brown for eight runs in one inning and romped in behind Sewell, 13 to 4, and the Cubs slugged the Bees dizzy, 15 to 8.

The "race" in the American League is becoming more laughable every day. Those amazing Yankees have now increased their lead to 4 1/2 games over the Red Sox and show no signs of mercy for the weak and helpless.

The young men of Manhattan have made it 12 in a row by taking the Indians, 7-3. And they did it in the usual Yankee style—homers by Henrich, Dickey, Rolfe and Gordon accounting for six of the Yankee runs. Johnny Allen was the victim of this murderous assault.

Meanwhile, the Red Sox were dropping one to Buck Newson and the Tigers, 7-2, in a game notable only for Hank Greenberg's eighth homer.

The Athletics, playing inspired ball lately, overcame the Browns, 7-3, and moved up into a tie with the Senators for fifth place. The Senators fell back when the White Sox came from behind in the ninth to win, 5 to 4.

FISHER EDGES TOLEDO'S STAR

Red Birds, St. Paul, Brewers In Fight For Third Position

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 24 — The stage was set today for a shift in positions in the American association pennant race with Columbus and St. Paul tied for fourth place and both only one game behind the Milwaukee squad, in third position.

The Columbus Red Birds fought an uphill battle against the Toledo Mud Hens at Toledo yesterday and took the only game of the series 3 to 2.

The game was a pitcher's duel between the Birds' Al Fisher and Toledo's Freddie Hutchinson, the reputed $100,000 rookie. A couple of Toledo errors cinched the game for Columbus.

At Minneapolis Kansas City defeated the Millers 10 to 6 to retain its lead in the circuit. Minneapolis scored all its runs in the first inning.

Milwaukee won its series opener against St. Paul at St. Paul 9 to 6. Roy Johnson, of the Brewers, sent a long homer over the spot he usually occupies in right field.

St. Louis and Indianapolis, idle yesterday, were scheduled to play today.

NEGRO FIGHTER READY TO FACE BRITISH CHAMP

LONDON, May 24—"Homicide" Henry Armstrong, hard-slugging American Negro, today skipped through a light workout as the last training preliminary before entering the ring tomorrow night to defend his world's welterweight title against British challenger Ernie Roderick.

Armstrong, former featherweight champion and current lightweight as well as welter titleholder, is odds-on favorite to defeat the 25-year-old Englishman.

Armstrong's trainers reported that a hand injury, which the colored champ sustained in a fight a few years ago, is restored to normal and shouldn't hamper his windmill type of attack.

Although Roderick is being hailed as the best welterweight Brit has produced since the days of Jack Hood, dopesters in London's leather-pushing industry aren't plunking down many shillings on the Britisher's chances of scoring an upset victory.

From Roderick's camp it was reported the challenger was likewise in tip-top shape, and would be ready to go the full 15 rounds at the indoor Harringay arena.

Armstrong, usually a wild puncher, will have to curb his out-of-bounds shots tomorrow, as the British boxing head has decreed that the American will defend his title under English boxing rules. A foul would cost him the fight.

7 to 5 Softball Joust Gained by Contractors

Lewis and Frisinger Contractors won a 7 to 5 softball game Tuesday evening from the Monarch Athletic Club in the city league. The contractors knocked off an early lead of 4 to 1, maintaining that advantage through the game.

Smallwood pitched for the winners and Chuck Hill was on the mound for the losing aggregation.

The game was marked by free hitting and 12 errors, the winners being guilty of five and the losers of seven. Many of the errors figured in the scoring.

McCONNELL SINGS OLD
"Let the Rest of the World Go
By," a song favorite which has defied the passing of time, will be sung by Smiling Ed McConnell during his broadcast at 9:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m., Thursday, May 25, over NBC networks. The singing philosopher also will be heard in
"I'll Be the Meanest Man in Town," "I Can't Give You Anything But Love," "Kids Again" and "These Remind Me of God."

YOUTH PREDOMINATES
The oldest member of the visiting delegation to Bing Crosby's Music Hall Thursday, May 25, will be 24-year-old Beverly Roberts when the other guests are Freddie Bartholomew and Pat Friday.

Beverly Roberts and Freddie Bartholomew have one thing in common in their various appearances on the screen—they've almost invariably played serious roles. Bing and Bob Burns hope to break through their reserve to the extent of making them both laugh out loud during separate interviews.

After getting two "rain checks" because of illness, Pat Friday intends to make it this time for the broadcast over the NBC red network at 9 p. m. The pretty UC. L. A. coed will warble "Begin the Beguine," and "Sing a Song of Sunbeams."

CBS STAR THEATRE
Basil Rathbone will play a dual role—one of radio's first attempts to present an actor playing two parts—when he guests on the CBS
Star Theatre tonight at 8 o'clock.
Rathbone will be starred in an original sketch titled "Merely Players" authored by Sidney Cook and Hartman Renaud. Frances Langford will sing "Wishing," and
"Our Love." Kenny Baker will sing "A Wandering Minstrel I."

AMERICAN LEGION POPPY DAY TO BE OBSERVED NEXT SATURDAY

POST AUXILIARY TAKES CHARGE OF ANNUAL SALE

Mayor W. B. Cady Proclaims Event; Disabled Veterans of War Benefit

American Legion Poppy Day will be observed in Circleville on Saturday, May 27. A proclamation designating the day was issued Wednesday by Mayor W. B. Cady.

The sale of poppies will be conducted by the Auxiliary of Howard Hall post, American Legion. Funds raised through the sale are placed in the rehabilitation and child welfare funds of the American Legion and its Auxiliary. Most of the money will be spent for activities in the communities where it is raised.

The poppies have been made by disabled World War veterans in government hospitals and in workrooms maintained for convalescents by the Auxiliary. Each veteran engaged in poppy making received one penny for each poppy he made. The slogan of Poppy Day is "Honor the dead and aid the living." The poppies are crepe paper replicas of the wild poppies of France and Belgium which grew in such profusion in the World War battle areas.

The following proclamation was issued today by Mayor W. B. Cady, designating Poppy Day.

"Whereas in the great crisis of the World War, the young men of Circleville offered their services to our country with exalted spirit of patriotism, numbers of them sacrificing their lives in that service.

"And whereas, the same exalted spirit of patriotism is needed today for the service of our country in its peace-time activities.

"Therefore, I, W. B. Cady, Mayor of the city of Circleville, urge all citizens to recall the spirit of these gallant dead and renew the memory of their high patriotic service by wearing the American Legion Auxiliary memorial poppy on Saturday, May 27.

"To that purpose, I do hereby proclaim, Saturday, May 27th, as Poppy Day in Circleville.

BOLINGER TRIAL ALMOST READY FOR JURY STUDY

COLUMBUS, May 24—The defense was expected to complete its case today or tomorrow in the trial of James A. Bolinger, former examiner in the state securities division, on charges of bribery.

Bolinger's counsel began calling witnesses yesterday after Judge Cecil J. Randall overruled a defense motion for a directed verdict as the state completed its case. The defendant is charged with aiding Edward T. Carney and Edwin Judy, former securities officials, in soliciting and accepting a $2,500 bribe.

The money allegedly came from William R. Parmele, former president of the Toledo Guaranty Co., and John Rossel, the firm's one-time vice president. Both now are in Ohio penitentiary in connection with the company's affairs.

FLOODWATERS FROM RHINE INUNDATE SIEGFRIED LINE

STRASBOURG, France, May 24—A 30-mile stretch of Germany's elaborate Siegfried line of fortifications was swamped under flood waters from the swollen River Rhine today, forcing Reich soldiers to evacuate their "west wall" first line defenses in the region of Kehl.

Last week, following an inspection of the Siegfried line, Chancellor Hitler termed it "invincible."

WHITE HATS FOR SPRING

IT'S still true that nothing gives you more of a costume lift than a new hat, particularly if it's white. An old but pretty custom in Manhattan and in every other town is to have at least one to dress up tailcoats, redingotes and jacket dresses. This season the urge is even stronger, due to emphasis on lingerie fashions and white gloves. Two white hats are shown today, along with a saucy cyclamen pink, all by Harryson. His colored homburg, upper left, is milan straw with taffeta bows in wine, pale blue and pink, and shaded pink veiling. The white shantung straw cartwheel, upper right, is set far back on the head behind two disarming daisies. Ribbon streamers tie in Little Girl fashion. Sailors are numerous in the white hat collection, the gardenia-crowned model, center, having its crown swathed in white veiling, which is either tied in a chin bow or in bandeau style at the back of the head.

JAPS HOLD UP BRITISH LINER

Destroyer's Officers Go Aboard Ranpura Off Hong Kong

HONG KONG, May 24—The British P. and O. liner Ranpura was held up temporarily and boarded by officers from a Japanese destroyer 60 miles from Hong Kong, it was revealed today.

The vessel was allowed to proceed when two British destroyers threatened to intervene.

On its arrival, passengers on board the Ranpura reported the destroyer fired two shots across the liner's bow and signalled it to halt. The Ranpura, however, raced toward British waters a mile away, chased by the Japanese vessel.

Later the Ranpura halted and three Japanese officers went aboard, remaining 20 minutes and examining the ship's papers despite the protests of the Ranpura's captain.

The Japanese ship departed when the British destroyer Duchess and another craft reached the scene.

SOVIET STORIES SEEN AS BID TO PACIFIC CONFAB

LONDON, May 24—Recent inspired articles in the Soviet press have been interpreted as an indirect bid for Anglo-French-Russian cooperation in the Pacific, the London News Chronicle reported from Moscow today.

The dispatch said the articles emphasized the conflict between Japanese and Anglo-French-American interests in the Far East, and asserted the Pacific air and naval bases of the "Democracies" in the Pacific are inadequate.

WINDY CITY TO PASS UP CONFAB OF DEMOCRATS

CHICAGO, May 24 — Reports that Chicago had the inside track to obtain the Democratic national convention next year today drew from Mayor Edward J. Kelly the assertion Illinois Democrats will make no organized attempt to bring the convention to the city. "Their price is too high," the mayor said.

Coincident with the mayor's statement, reports were circulated that Democrats in Washington favored New York for the 1940 convention site, provided the World's Fair is continued for a second year. It also is the belief in Chicago political circles that Republicans already have chosen the city for that party's national conclave, but this report was without confirmation.

JAPS HOLD UP BRITISH LINER

Destroyer's Officers Go Aboard Ranpura Off Hong Kong

HONG KONG, May 24 — The British P. and O. liner Ranpura was held up temporarily and boarded by officers from a Japanese destroyer 60 miles from Hong Kong, it was revealed today.

The vessel was allowed to proceed when two British destroyers threatened to intervene.

On its arrival, passengers on board the Ranpura reported the destroyer fired two shots across the liner's bow and signalled it to halt. The Ranpura, however, raced away, British waters a mile away, chased by the Japanese vessel.

Later the Ranpura halted and three Japanese officers went aboard, remaining 20 minutes and examining the ship's papers despite the protests of the Ranpura's captain.

The Japanese ship departed when the British destroyer Duchess and another craft reached the scene.

SOVIET STORIES SEEN AS BID TO PACIFIC CONFAB

LONDON, May 24—Recent inspired articles in the Soviet press have been interpreted as an indirect bid for Anglo-French-Russian cooperation in the Pacific, the London News Chronicle reported from Moscow today.

The dispatch said the articles emphasized the conflict between Japanese and Anglo-French-American interests in the Far East, and asserted the Pacific air and naval bases of the "Democracies" in the Pacific are inadequate.
